

Dr Lana Petö Kujundžić speech

If the children do not understand the question, they cannot answer it in the police, the prosecutor's office and in the court, then it is a problem for the state and the government because justice cannot be done.

All countries that have ratified the Convention on the Rights of the Child, such as Great Britain, are obliged to respect the rights of the child and to take into account the child's best interests and allow the child to be heard and express his views.

Therefore, the Manifesto that proclaims the rights of the child is important.

PhD Lana Petö Kujundžić, judge

High Criminal Court of Republic Croatia

Association of juvenile and family judges and expert for children